This analysis does not include the requirements which apply to batteries. Should the items in question contain batteries, additional requirements will apply. Please refer to the "Electronic/Measuring Devices – Batteries" subcategory for details.

Additionally, it has been considered for the purposes of this analysis that the items in question are not electrical (in the sense that they do not plug in to an electrical socket) or energy using, and that they do not transmit or receive radio waves. In the contrary case, additional requirements will apply. Please refer to the "Electronic/Measuring Devices – Chargers" subcategory for details.

* Please note that products for children under age 14 may be considered toys if they are intended for use in learning or play; as such, products that may not traditionally fall under the category of "toys" under the Toys Regulations may still be considered “toys” if they are marketed as such or are intended to be teaching or learning products for children. To the extent that the product is potentially also a “toy”, please refer to the document entitled “Toys” for full details. Where there are different or conflicting rules or requirements with respect to two categories of products, please comply with the more onerous requirements as required by applicable law.
